ASSASSIN- Week #1

"I've never been more terrified in my life. I walk the halls cautious and attentively. I'm watching everyone who could possibly be in drama because I have no intentions of dying in the halls. I just like to peacefully go to my next class without someone coming at me with a Crayola washable marker! There is no way I'm getting my arm pulled out of the socket...I have my doctor on speed dial because of this!"
-Maddie Shannon

"I'm already dead."
-Joe Malone

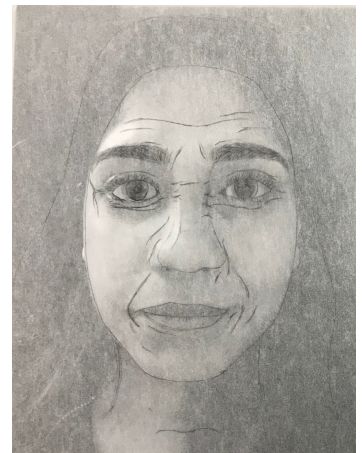

"It stresses me out a lot but I like that we all have something to bond over, whether we are alive or dead. it's a very smart way to bring us together and also put us against each other. I like it. In theater, we can't be competitive with acting, so this brings out our competitive side."
-Isabella Walrath

"I don't feel safe in the hallways."
-Liam Klopfesntein

DRAMA 2 IS OLD!

Drama two classes are venturing into their next unit after their murderous soap operas- make-up! Vinee Verma, sophomore, is featured in the image shown. The first part of this assignment, done by Verma, was to outline the basic features of her face to show her facial structure. The second part of the process was done by classmate Sarah Holec (sophomore). Sarah kindly offered a few words about the process of this assignment, "I buddied up with Vinee, and we drew wrinkles on each other's outlines. This was done to depict what we will look like when we are older. This specific activity is a part of the stage makeup unit in drama two, which will help us for basic stage makeup application skills. These skills are needed if you're planning on pursuing a theatrical career or just need another skill on your resume!" Just another thing to look forward to, or look back on, in drama two!
